will not engage directly in combat operations. Other analysts believe that the French would not allow the survival of Chadian forces to be threatened. Even the holders of this view believe the French will not actively assist the Chadians unless the situation becomes serious.	25X1
Qadhafi has the political situation in Libya under control in spite of increasing awareness and unhappiness with what is happening in Chad by both the military and the population at large. The longer the situation in Chad continues, the greater the problem for Qadhafi, especially if Libyan forces take significant casualties. If popular discontent rises, however, we would expect Qadhafi to adjust his policies to reduce the domestic pressures well before they threaten his grip on power.	25X1
Qadhafi's decision to move the government has not been popular but it has made a coup more difficult. The plan to decentralize and relocate the government has been in the works for two years and may have been acclerated by the US airstrike. The military is unhappy with the move and most senior officers fly in and out of the new headquarters daily. However, there are no military units in the region to threaten the government, the new capital is in Qadhafi's tribal heartland, and the location may make a US airstrike more complicated. - Warning Note If Habre engages in a conventional defense of Fada, he will likely be defeated. We should not expect the French to prevent this, although they might intervene if the survival of the Chadian forces came into question.	25X1 25X1
